FLORIDA CITIZENS REALIZE ECONOMIC VALUE GOOD ROADS

Senator White Moss, Back From Pleasure Trip, Tells of County There Voting Bond Issue Assessing Each Person $150

TOURIST TRAVEL MORE THAN PAYS FOR ROADS

PINEVILLE, Mar. 30.—If Kentucky would bond itself for state highways on the same ratio per capita that Citrus County, Florida, has it would vote a bond issue of $375,000,000 instead of the $50,000,000 contemplated. Citrus County has a population of 5,220 (not many more inhabitants in the whole county than in the city of Pineville) and has voted a bond issue for roads of $750,000, which means approximately $150 per person including men, women and children. If Kentucky would vote the same ratio ($150 per person) with her 2,500,000 it would mean the $375,000,000 bond. These comparisons were drawn by Senator White L. Moss, who has just recently returned from a pleasure trip to Florida, and who always includes in his pleasure something about good roads.

The bond issue passed in Citrus court the first of the month over ninety per cent of the total votes cast favoring the issue.

In Polk County, Florida, a bond issue of $2,000,000 was voted a few years ago, and they evidently found that the investment was profitable for now they come forward with a $3,000,000 bond issue. A clipping from a Florida paper says: "Incidentally it might be mentioned that since Polk county spent the first $2,000,000 on roads, it has evidenced the most remarkable growth and development of any county in the state, particularly along agricultural lines." Polk is an inland county with no resorts, no cities and a population of 46,000.

Pinellas county in Florida will vote $3,275,000 bonds May 2 for the purline roads through out the county, pose of rebuilding 90 miles of trunk This is the county where St. Petersburg and Clearwater are situated.

According to Senator Moss, the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce at Jacksonville estimates that the tourists during the 1922-23 season left in Florida more than $300,000,000. If Kentucky had the hard surfaced roads she could expect the same from tourist travel. The tourists alone have more than paid for the roads in Florida, according to the C. of C. secretary.

Wed 73 Years, Aged Couple Calls Divorce Evils of Present Day Result of Easy Courtship and Marriage

MR. AND MRS. JOHN C. DEMAREST.

WICKOFF, N. J., March 29—Divorce can be prevented by hard work. The trouble these days is that married folks have things too easy."

Thats the opinion of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Demarest, married 73 years and still happy. He is 95 and she is 91. He still works his own garden and she does her own washing.

They were married March 2, 1850, raised four children, and have six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

"Getting married wasn't a joke in those days," said Grandpa Demarest. "We rode horseback when we went courting and the boys would race to the girl's house. No telephone then, and no rural mail deliveries."

"Girls didn't think so much about dress," said Grandma Demarest. "I had two dresses a year, one of flax and one of wool, both home-grown and homemade. And one pair of shoes a year. We saved our shoes and didn't put them on until just before we started for church or a dance."

Their wedding day was the first time Mrs. Demarest ever rode in a wagon. They have built their own houses of hewn logs and they have only been separated once, when "Grandpa" visited his brother in Iowa for two weeks 37 years ago.

"We've been happy because we haven't had time to be anything else," he said. "Young folks these days don't work hard enough."

The aged couple who are looking forard to celebrating their diamond wedding anniversary, live with their daughter, Mrs. Peter S. Pullis at Spring Lake Farm, near Wyckoff.

UPWARD TREND IN COMMODITY PRICES STILL CONTINUES

Business Past Thirty Days Show Emphatic Improvement Despite Uncurbed Advances Says Federal Reserve Report

COAL SITUATION DULL, MANY MINES SHUT DOWN

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, March 30—Despite the continued unward tendency in commodity prices, general business conditions in the Eighth Federal Reserve District "was emphatically in the direction of futher improvement" in the last thirty days, according to the monthly business report issued today by the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank.

The upward trend of prices continue in spite of endeavors of manufacturers and producers of raw materials to curb advances, "which in many instances are deemed unwarranted by existing conditions of supply and demand," the report asserts. The more conservative business men fear a possible buyers strike unless the upward swing abates, the report declares, but so far it has acted as a stimulus to business, as the desire to obtain goods and service appears to be considered more than the price at the present.

"In virtually all lines investigated," the report says, "sales of wholesale and retail merchants reflected expansion, and manufacturers carried their production higher than for any similar period since the early part of 1920, with many attaining the highest levels ever reached.

"Additional advances in commodity prices and wages were noted, and there ere futher accrations to the number of employed in the ranks of both common and skilled workers."

Wholesalers report an steady growth in the volume of advance orders, the report continues, and for the first time since early in 1920 there are signs of speculative buying.

"Activities in the building industry were well sustained," the report says. "Program for highway construction indicated a heavier volume of work of this sort during the coming spring and summer than ever before undertaken.

"Marked strength with numerous advances has marked the textile market, particularly in goods based on cotton and silk. Most building materials and iron and steel products sustained further advances, the numerous items in the list of drugs and chemicals have been marked up. All of the non-ferrous metals were higher, with copper, lead and zinc recording new high level on the movement.

"Generally the position of farmers in grain areas is stronger that at the corresponding season last year, and in the south, where high prices have been realized on cotton, and the tobacco and rice crops have been profitably marketed, conditions are decidely prosperous."

The coal situation continues dull, the report adds, and mines in the district average from 2 1-2 to 3 days actively each week, with a number of mines closed down because of lack of orders.

LOCAL YOUTH CHOOSES LARGE BUS FOR JOY RIDE AROUND TOWN

"Stolen kisses are sweetest," according to the ancient and popular adage, but how about a stolen bus in the dead of night?

This daring and perilous experiment was tried by a Middlesboro boy last night and he got away ith it, too, that is, until the engine went dead and he was compelled to abandon the car. Running a bus along Cumberland avenue at night at a high rate of speed doubtless furnishes the most exhilirating amusement that mere mortal will ever attain Add to this the element of panic which comes from a knowlege of the roads and the thought that Nemesis in the form of the bus owner or a policeman is following close behind and the thrill becomes a spasm of sheer delight.

The large, heavy bus of Andy Moyers which is used on the Tazewell line was taken from its accustomed place on Cumberland avenue last night. Frantic efforts to recover the stolen vehicle disclosed the fact that a boy was driving it in West End. For a time they lost track of him but later in the night the car was found on Cumberland avenue, in the middle of the street where it had been abandoned. It is said that the engine went dead and the boy could not start it. His identity is not known.

UNUSUAL NUMBER OF BEGGARS IN CITY LAST FEW DAYS

An unusual number of beggars have made their appearance in Middlesboro during the apst few days, according to C. Cuthbert, Salvation Army commandant. Eleven applied for aid at his headquarters yesterday.

Most of them purport to come from other places and say they are looking for work. Appalachia seems to be a favorite former abode for the incoming mendicants. Commandant Cuthbert says that all of them are "dead beats," that they are not trying to find work and that most of them evade investigation.

ONE KILLED, ONE HURT IN AFFRAY NEAR HARLAN

Third Shooting in Vicinity in Past Forty-Eight Hours—Quarrel Started Over Joking Each Other

SEVEN DEAD, TWO FATALLY HURT IN RECENT SHOOTING

George Belcher, 23, is dead and Jesse Pace, 35, is probably fatally wounded as a result of a shooting affray yesterday afternoon at the head of Straight Creek. This is the third shooting in the vicinity of Harlan in the last forty-eight hours, and seven persons have lost their lives and two are probably fatally shot as the result of the three shootings.

Details are rather meager on the Belcher-Pace shooting, as there is no telephone there and news came through officers in Harlan and Pineville, but it is understood that the shooting was the result of a quarrel which started with the two men joking each other. Pace is said to have angered Belcher and the latter drew his gun and shot Pace down. Pace then drew his gun, reports say, and killed Belcher.

Pace was formerly a policeman at Harlan and then a deputy sheriff at Benham. No information as to the family of either man is available.

SCHOOL CHILDREN MAKING POSTERS

For Display On Open School Day Here April 26—Show Real Artistic Ability

Posters for display on Open School Day here April 26 and possibly for the state P. T. A. convention in Louisville next month are being made by the school children. About 200 of them will be required, according to Miss Wilhelmine Marx who has charge of the work.

The pictures, most of which are made for health exhibits show real talent and artistic ability. Some of the ideas are furnished by Miss Marx and the teachers, though in many cases the pupils originate them. The large posters are two or three feet square and are painted in many colors. Children of the lower grades usually cut out small pictures and paste them on the cardboard though many of the young pupils show surprising ability at drawing and make the pictures themselves.

The work is done under the auspices of the Red Cross. That institution furnishes all materials and suggests the general lines along which the posters must be made. About sixty or seventy dollars worth of materials have already been furnished the local schools. Pupils are doing the work in Miss Marx's office.

A THOUGHT

The Lord rewarded me according to my righteousness according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.—II Samuel, 22:21.

He that has light within his own clear breast may sit in the center and enjoy bright day.—Milton.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WTH MIDDLESBORO?

This question has been asked in our presence at least a dozen times in the last few days. One begins to wonder if something is really wrong with our city, when so many of its leading citizens are continually expressing adverse opinions as to its progressiveness.

One citizen says that with all of its abominable streets and its lack of a unified program of development, he would rather live here than in any city he knows of. This man is worthy of being called a patriot.

But with all of this love for Middlesboro and its people, one must admit that there is less cooperation and reciprocal helpfulness displayed between the business men of this city than in most cities of this size. With the single exception of the Kiwanis club, and fraternal orders, civic organizations among the men of Middlesboro might as well not be inaugurated. After one enthusiastic meeting when everybody vies with each other in pledging one hundred per cent support, the organization passes peacefully out of existence, its dying struggles being only the feeble protest of two or three men who have the only real vision of its usefulness.

We ask the question again, "What is the mater with Middlesboro?" It is easy to answer. It is a one man town, with everybody for himself. What greater indictment could be recorded against any town? Ought not every business man in this city ask himself the question, "Am I not the one who is guilty? Is it not now time for me to put something into Middlesboro besides merely living to myself?"

DICKENS AND THE MOVIES

It is a matter of common complaint that the charm of Dickens disappears when his books are put on the screen. He is without doubt the favorite novelist of the English people, but most people who see the film version of his books go away disappointed. Somehow or other Dickens of the movie is not Dickens at all.

One reason for this undoubtedly is that an unusually high per cent of the attraction of the characters of Dickens lies in the way they talk. What kind of a creature would Sairy Gamp be without her voice or Mr. Micawber if he were reduced to silence? Unfortunately the human tongue is the one thing the silent drama cannot reproduce, at leat not until we get camera and the dictaphone better synchronized This objection may probably always make Dickens a failure in the movies, but even if it were not for this, the directors of the pictures make a great contribution to the failure. They do this by starring the character who bears the title to the book. Now the title of a Dickens book never names the leading character. It is Mr. Pecksniff that hold the center of the stage in Martin Chuzzlewit and Mr. Micawber in David Copperfield. Oliver Twist is not the hero of Oliver Twist; perhaps the artful dodger is, perhaps it is Fagin. Samuel Weller had a much greater part in the Pickwick Papers than Pickwick did.

Perhaps the greatest hindrance to a filming of Dickens lies in the fact that it is impossible to get actors at all worthy of the comedy. The comic characters of Dickens are ludicrous beyond anything in earth or sky or sea. Think of how they would suffer at the hand of the professional funny men of the movies!—Louisville Herald.

TO MY LAUNDRY

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ By Berton Braley ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

My collar edges saw my neck
And cut me somewhat jaggedly,
My underwear comes back a wreck,
My socks you launder raggedly;
And though to wear such garments hurts
I'll stand the holes you cut in them,
But kindly do not pin my shirts
And kindly do not button them!

I remove each pin with care
Before my shirts I don again,
Each one I must unbutton, ere
I ever put it on again;
Oh, starch my garments till it hurts
And pains me to be shut in them,
But kindly do not pin my shirts
And kindly do not button them!

Fold them as often as you will
And doll them up expensively·
It's useless, but I'll pay the bill
Nor murmur too extensively
It is, perhaps my just deserts
That I feel like a mutt in them
But please, oh, please don't pin my shirts,
And please, oh, please don't button them.

Fellowship of Prayer

FRIDAY
The Price He Paid

"And it was the third hour, and they crucified him." Mark 15:25.

Read Mark 15:21-41.

"We are bound up together in one great tragedy of transgression."

MEDITATON: The supreme tragedy of life is not only that Jesus was crucified on Golgotha, centuries ago, but that he is crucified daily.

HYMN:
Beneath the cross of Jesus
I fain would take my stand—
The shadow of a mighty rock
Within a weary land,
A home within the wilderness,
A rest upon the way,
From the burning of the noontide heat
And the burden of the day.

PRAYER: O God, who art love, grant to thy children to bear one another's burden in perfect good will, that thy peace which passeth understanding may keep our hearts and minds in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

ROOT CROPS IN THE BACKYARD GARDEN

Children are told to eat carrots if they want color in their cheeks and beets to be strong and able to romp and play. Just how much there is to this is hard to say, but all the root crops are rich in vitamins and the elements that aid digestion. Carrots are rich in the coloring matter known as "carrotin," which is also present in green grass and gives the rich color to the cow's milk during the early summer. Radishes are effective for warding off scurvy and similar diseases, and are eaten more as a salad than a true vegetable.

Root crops such as carrots, beets, parsnips and salsify yield large qualities of actual food from a small space of ground and for this reason are adapted for growing in the small garden. Parsnips may be grown as an early spring crop and are used before the extremely hot weather of summer. In the north parsnips require the entire growing season for their development and may be left in the ground during the winter and to a certain degree improve with freezing.

The essential for growing root crops are a deep, rich, well-drained soil, good seed, proper thinning and frequent shallow cultivation. None of the root crops, with the exception of beets, can be transplanted successfully as the breaking of the tap root in transplanting causes them to grow rough and distorted. The proper method is to spade and pulverize the soil 8 to 10 inches deep, working fine fertilizer to the full depth of spading, then sow the seeds where they are to grow and thin out the plants so that every plant left has room to develop. In the case of beets what seed "ball" containing one to three seeds, consequently beets usually come so much thicker than the gardner expects. Carrot and parsnip seeds lose their vitality or power to grow very quicky and seed of last year's production should always be used.

When it comes to planting the beets carrots and other root crops the soil which has been spaded and fertilized should be raked smooth and the little rows of furrows formed by means of the hoe handle or a rounded stick drawn along a tight line. The distance between rows may be 18 inches for parsnips and salsify. The seeds should not be covered more than 1 inch deep on sandy soils, and the soil used for covering them should always be fine and mellow. If the soil is in the least dry it should be firmed over the seeds by laying a board on top of the row after the seeds are covered, and then walking on the board.

Thinning the plants is the important part in growing all root crops. Carrots should be thinned twice, the first time to about one and one-half inches and later when the roots are large enough for us as "baby" carrots every other one can be removed. The same plan may be followed in thinning beets the thinnings be used as greens and as small table beets cooked and buttered.

Parsnips and salsify should be thinned to an even stand of three to four inches at one thinning. After thinning, the soil should be drawn around the remaining plants. Frequent shallow cultivation and irrigation during extremely dry weather are essential to the quick growth of all the root crops.

RIGHT ON THE JOB B'GOSH!

LETTER FROM KARL WHITNEY TO ALICE HAMILTON

ALICE DEAR:

The other day when you called me over to tea with those ungentle gentlewomen I suddenly became aware that you had grown up.

You very skilfully turned their shafts of curious criticism of your sister into a kind of boomerang that reflected upon themselves.

Now my dear—I was going to say child, for I have known you ever since you were born and I turned up my nose at your puckered little red face when Leslie insisted that I should look at her new sister.

I repeat now my dear girl—does that not sound quite young ladyish—when you know that I am coming to you for advice I hope you will understand that in my eyes at least you are mature of mind if not of body.

After this long preamble, I will come to the point.

I am very anxious to give Leslie a pearl necklace for her wedding present and I do not know just how to do it without drawing out some sensational comment about the gift.

Though why as old and as rich a man friend as I should not give her anything he wished and she might accept is a conundrum I cannot answer.

Alice dear. I expect that you, like everyone else, kno that ever since I was eight and Leslie four I have intended to marry Leslie. No other girl has ever had the slightest interest for me. My one thought, my one dream of real living has been of the time when Leslie would be my wife.

When my father died, and I, at twelve years of age, came into more pocket money than knew was in the orld. my first thought was to buy something for Leslie.

Immediately rushed over to her and asked—"if you could have a piece of jewelry, what would you ask for?"

"A pearl necklace," she answered promptly.

"I'll get one for you immediately," I promised proudly, never realizing what a pearl necklace would cost.

But I soon found out that pearl necklaces were beyond the pocketbook of even a little boy whose allowance at twelve years old was over five thousand dollars a year.

Howevery, not to be daunted, I went to one of my fathers friends—one of the oldest jewelers in the country—and asked him to buy me at least one pearl a year until I got all of my money and then I would add the remainder of the gems necessary to make a splendid string.

The man was amused to think that a boy of my age should have such ambition. Of course I did not tell him it was for Leslie. Then and there I arranged to give him one hundred and seventy-five dollars a month out of my five hundred to pay for a beautiful two-thousand dollar pearls.

From then on this man has almost made it his life business to match this pearl and when I became of age I was able to add more than one a year.

Suffice to say, I have now a string of sixty perfectly matched pearls on my hands which I have always thought of as belonging to Leslie.

I intended to give it to her on her marriage. That she is not going to marry me does not alter the matter in the least.

But now that you are grown up you will know what a fuss Mrs. Grundy will make of it. Consequently, I want you to help me think of some way to presenting these pearls to Leslie without causing a furore.

You and I, dear Alice, are the only ones in this momentous secret.

Help me out, will you not?

Confidingly,

KARL.

LETTER FROM ALICE HAMILTON TO BETTY STOKLEY

Oh Betty, Betty, I am so sorry you are over there in Europe.

Betty my dear I have stumbled—literally stumbled—onto the most romantic episode that probably has happened in this practical twentieth century.

I will not confide it to anyone but you, and not even to you if I did not know that you had gone abroad to gather material for your great novel

This true romance will show you, I always contended when we were at school—that you can find undying love in this country just as well as anywhere else.

Betty, the man I told you was in love with my sister Leslie, has for years been collecting a string of pearls for her and he is going to give it to her regardless of the fact that she is going to marry another man.

He wants me to find some way for him to give her this glorious present without making a sensation. I am writing to you to put your wits to work to help me devise some plan to do this. It ought to be easy for you because you are going to be an author and you must have plenty of such plans in your mind.

Have no time t owrite any more as I must know what you think about this immediately.

Lovingly,

ALICE.

PAVLOWA DANCING

Footsteps of youth through the spring time playing;
Footfalls of snow in a blue mist straying;
The rose of Russia in a bright wind swaying—
A rose of fire and snow.

Voices chanting everywhere and no word said;
Fairy bells from ancient towers signalling the dead;
Light love tuning viols while the dance runs red—
A flaming dance of death.

White barbaric inters and a sky star-strung;
All the hidden pathways, all hidden songs unsung,
Caught in flying footsteps over the wild music hung;
She dances—and the Czar lies dead.

TODAY'S RECIPES

HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

The real French method of making a Hollandaise sauce is to make an emulsion of egg yolks, acid and butter, cooking it over water. Ti this thick sauce, which is quite the finest of all sauces, some American cooks add boiling water, thinning the sauce and making it good for baked or boiled fish where a thinner sauce is more desirable. Because the sauce cannot be kept hot without danger of separation, many cooks add a small amount of thick white sauce.

A good recipe consists of one-half cup butter, tow egg yolks, one tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar, one-quarter teaspoon salt and a little cayenne.

Work the butter until creamy, but not soft and divide it into three portions. Place one portion with egg yolks and acid in a sauce pan. Hold the sauce pan over hot water, and stir constantly until the egg yolks have begun to thicken the butter; add a second portion of butter, then the remaining piece. When butter is melted and the mixture is as smooth as mayonnaise, remove from the fire. Season and serve at once.

If separation does take place add a teaspoon of boiling water or cream and stir vigorously.

Hollandaise may be used with a tenderloin of beef, veal cutlet, fried or broiled fish, artichokes, asparagus and many egg dishes. There are many variations such as the addition of tarragon, anchovy sauce, cream or tomato purie.

THE NEWS FROM PINEVILLE

HEALTH OFFICER'S WORK EXTENSIVE

Has Treated More Than 1100 Bell County Patients in Past Six Months

PINEVILLE, Mar. 30.—More than 1,100 men and women have visited the health clinics in the basement of the courthouse at Pineville and Middlesboro since it was started six months ago, according to a report made by Dr. George Hays, Health Officer. The first month Dr. Hays had only 79 patients, but the number more than doubled during the following month, or November. During January 323 men and women were treated, which is is the greatest number in any month. During March there have been 292 treated.

Dr. Hays has given 674 treatments for syphilis in the last six months, 388 to men and 286 to women; he has made 102 microscopic examinations for gonorhea and has treated 29 patients; he has made 294 Wasserman tests, 176 for men and 118 for women.

Besides the clinic work he has made two visits to the Red Bird community to aid in stamping out diptheria; he has inaugurated a clean up campaign in Middlesboro and Pineville, inspecting streets, alleys, yards, restaurants and hotels, and dairy conditions. His work strikes at the center of all disease and unhealthful conditions.

However, unless the Fiscal Court, which meets next week, can find some method to obtain the $3000 necessary to maintain the health department, his work will necessarily be discontinued. At the last meeting of the court it appropriated $1000 for the first quarter which ends April 1, and now it will be necessary to devise some way for the appropriation for the remainder of the year. P. A. Heath, auditor, said that he did not know how it would be managed but believes that the court should find some way to continue the work.

SURPLUS WOMEN IN EUROPE WORLD'S GREATEST TRAGEDY

Now 20,000,000 More Females Than Males—Fundamentals of Society Threatened by Resulting Conditions

ILLEGITIMACY AND IMMORALITY GREATER THAN EVER

By Milton Bronner

LONDON, March 30—Nearly 20,000,000 girls and women in Europe today are doomed to die old maids.

They are sentenced to sex starvation; no husband, no home, no motherhood.

It's a situation without precedent in history. It's the biggest human interest story in the world.

Yet governments close their eyes to it, statesmen and politicians ignore it, reporters and authors avoid it. It's too vast in all aspects—political, economic and moral—for them to grapple with.

There are 20,000,000 more females than males in Europe today because of the vagaries of the birthrate, the survival of more infant girls than boy babies, the decimation of men by war and the heavier tool of males taken by famine and pestilence.

Fundamentals Of Life Involved

These millions of so-called superfluous omen are creating questions involving everything of fundamental importance; the sanctity and preservation of the home, the social and political equality of women, work and wages, and the next generation's heritage of good or evil.

In the British Isles the superfluous women number 2,000,000. In Russia 8,000,000.

Their 10,000,000 sisters are scattered thoroughout the other countries.

Not only are there no legitimate mates for these 20,000,000 superfluous women but eligible young men are deterred from marrying by lack of work, cuts in wages, scarcity of houses, higher cost of necessities and threats of new wars.

The result is that a spirit of after-the-war recklessness prevades Europe. Men and women alike spend more of their wages, they are keener in pursuing pleasures, they are more defiant of the conventions and lax in morals.

The male is supreme. At dances he has six girls to pick from where he formerly had to compete for a partner. Everywhere you see many girls dancing together; hostesses giving balls have a hard time getting as many men as women.

A new type has developed; the paid male escort. In Paris, in Nice, even in Monte Carlo you'll see well-to-do women of middle age dancing with men while charming girls are wallflowers.

In every class of society girls will put up with almost any sort of a man for the sake of having him to go out with.

To make themselves companionable girls smoke, drink, pet and risk other indiscretions.

More Babies Born Out Of Wedlock

More children are being born out of wedlock than ever before. In England the increase has engaged Parliament's attention, but the later official figures show England least badly offin this respect.

Out of every 10,000 babies born, the number of illegitimate are as follows:

England and Wales	455
Scotland	711
France	870
Italy	477
Belgium	641
Holland	213
Norway	699
Sweden	1494
Denmark	1043

Throughout Europe is an increasing movement to assist unmarried mothers and give children born out of wedock rights they never had before.

Maud Royden, the greats British woman preacher, says:

"The right to motherhood is a claim based on the belief that the creative impulse is more—or more consciously—present in the sexual nature of a woman that of a man; and that in consequence the satisfaction of the impulse is to a great extent the satisfaction of a need which makes the disproportionate number of women in any country a real tragedy.

"I realize the cruelty of a civilization in which war and its accessories create an artifical excess of women over men and in consequence deprive many women of motherhood."

Steps To Aid Luckless Children

To attribute the increase of illegitimacy to this yearning for motherhood is at least the charitable viewpoint.

Legislation has been undertaken in several countries including England, Norway, Sweden and Germany to require father to support children born out fo wedlock, to make such children's right more broad and secure. But France and the Latin countries are doing nothing along this line though legitimate births decrease while illegitimacy increases.

The various countries are striving in divers ways to stimulate the birthrate among the married. In France for instance 53 business associations combine to pay a million employes bonuses for each child. Christiana, the capital of Norway, pays pensions to widows, women divorced or separated from their husbands and unmarried women who have children.

More Divorces Than Ever

Unquestionably thousand of women have died of starvation, or of diseases bred of hunger; but many others have taken "the easy way," with the result that the divorce records, as in England, show more homes broken up by unfaithfulness of husbands.

The woman lucky enough to have a husband has to fight to hold him.

The 20,000,000 superfluous women stand in the path of political progress of their on sex.

The law of supply and demand seems to operate herein as elsewhere. The more wheat there is, the less the farmers get for it. The more women there are, the less they can get for themselves.

So women politically have added little to the gains they made in the ay of equal suffrage and equal rights before the war. They have less political influence, if anything. France, for instance, recently voted down woman suffrage.

In 40 or 60 years—after two or three generations—matters probably will readjust themselves. Europe's attitude seems to be: "Let Nature take its course."

Indian War Has Movie Color

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 29—All the picturesque features that characterize Indian warfare as depicted in "penny dreadfuls" and wild west movies have been resurrected in what is probably America's last Indian war, now being ended in the mountains near here.

"Old Posey" reputed leader of the warring Piutes and Utes, took part in warfare against the whites when the west was young.

He is said to have surrounded himself with a body of old-time scalpers who are ready to amputate the hair of any whites that come within their grasp.

War Paint Used

War paint and the traditional war attire of the tribes is being used.

Fighting on both sides is being carried on from behind trees, stumps and rocks. The locale of the battle is the wildest part of the Utah mountains.

But this last flash of insurrection on the part of the fast vanishing redskins is doomed to failure. For even now the mountains have been wiped almost clean of renegrade redskins by posses under the direction of United States Marshall J. Ray Ward.

There have been frequent clashes between the settlers and the Indians of San Juan county during the last few years and now the settlers are determined to rid the country of the Indian menace.

The present trouble started when "Old Dutch's Boy" and "Bishop's Boy" were seized for robbing a sheep camp. The Piute Indians surrounded the village or Blanding opened fire on the town and rescued the two youths.

Instigator Killed

Later "Bishop's Boy" was shot and killed by the white posse.

Formerly the Indians of Utah camped close to Salt Lake City and were seen frequently in the streets. Gradually they retreated and were placed on reservation.

The Old Posey gang composed largely of young renegrades from several tribes as well as the Piute and Ute, never stayed long on the reservation.

LOVE OF WOMAN DRIVES MAN TO SOLITUDE; LOVE OF HOME IMPELS HIM TO FIGHT CITY

FREDERICK ASHTON AND HIS "HOME".

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 29—This is the true sroty of a real life hermit.

Its hero is the same picturesque hero one meets in fiction—a man whose soul has been seared by a hapless love affair and who has resolved to live alone, shunning his human fellows and living in the past.

But this hero is more—he is a man whose love of home is so great that he has fought the city of St. Paul to a standstill for the right to live in a floorless, mud-covered hut he built with his own hands.

St. Paul's hermit is Frederick Ashton. With the aid of a few chickens and a barren-looking patch of ground, the white-haired man eked out an existance through the summer and fall.

But when the Minnesota winter came, the aged man, worn with privation, slipped on the mud flood of his shack and lay unconscious until he was removed to an infirmary.

When consciousness returned, he came back. He found neighbors had removed his scanty possessions. He sued for their recovery, presenting a moving plea for the right to live on his "own."

He won the battle. His chattels were restored to him. He returned to his home, happy to be independent again.

Now Ashton stands with dignity in the door of his hovel and regrets he cannot ask nespaper representatives inside. His accents are the inflections of a cultivated Englishman, his bearing distinguished.

"As a young man," Ashton confesses, "I was foolish enough to love a girl whom my family considered socially beneath me. This was in England.

'One morning I came down to breakfast and said, 'father, I am going to marry Jenny.' He said I could pack my trunk and get out. I did.

Did Ashton marry Jenny? The aged man shakes his head and will say no more about a romance that has been buried—who knows how many years?

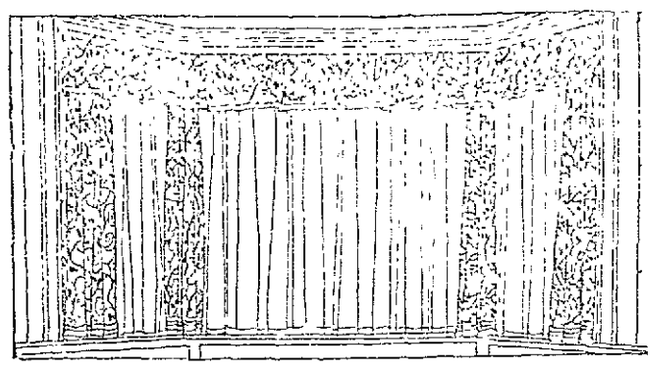
SPRING GARDENERS GETTING BUSY IN MIDDLESBORO

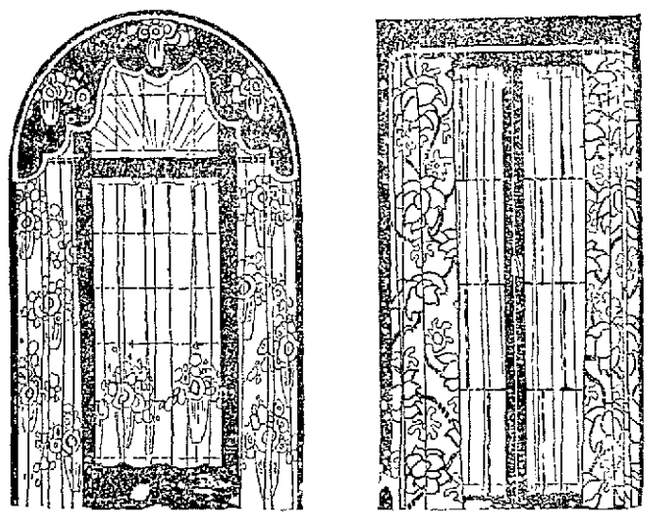
Tillers of the soil are beginning to get busy in Middlesboro. Local hardware dealers report that they have already sold some garden implements, though of course it is still too early to expect much in this line. Grocers report that garden seeds are also beginning to be something other than an ornament in their stores.

A number of freshly plowed vacant lots may be seen in the city and it is not at all necessary to go to the outskirts of town to witness these signs of industry and thrift for there are some right in the heart of Middlesboro. On Cumberland avenue land that is worth more than a hundred dollars a front foot is being prepared for cultivation.

Obviously the call of Nature is being felt and answered by lovers of the soil. Some who seem a little doubtful whether or not now is the propitious time for preliminary preparations for gardens may be seen raking vacant lots and back-yards.

Change Home Raiment for Spring Just as You Would Own Garments





THREE SUGGESTIONS FOR WINDOW DRAPERIES FOR THREE KINDS OF WINDOWS.

By Marion Hale

Now that spring is officially here, spring and summer rainment for our homes as well as ourselves must be considered. Many a window is fairly moaning to have its heavy winter wear taken off and some light, new draperies supplied.

Down should come the heavy curtains of repp, velour, velvet and even silk which stately drawing rooms have been curtained with during the winter.

Down should come even the light taffeta curtains now so popular in well furnished homes, particularly for the bedroom.

And up should go the lightest, airiest, thinnest nets to be found, for soon the heat will be upon us and every window will be counted upon to do its bit toward cooling the room behind it.

Net Curtains

The handsomest net for living rooms, dining rooms and halls is undoubtedly the now popular square meshed net called tuscan. It comes in a most beautiful and practical dull ecru, that shade best loved by the interior decorators because it looks so well in almost any room with any kind of furniture and at any type of window—from the tall, narrow window set of a deep recess to the sauciest of short casement indows.

For the room furnished in antique pieces of either walnut or mahogany, a finer curtain of sampler lace net or casement net is more suitable because those types of net have quaint, faintly-done filet figures which harmonize perfectly with the spirit of the antique.

One of he newest and best indow coverings now on the market is a sturdy yet dainty net known as Oxford Cross. This comes in a delightful sunshine effect, the main threads being golden ecru, but an occasional thread of dull rose or blue being woven into the mesh.

Can't Look In

These curtains are practical for the whole house, and while being almost unbelievably transparent to one indoors, they positively shut out all view of the house interior to anyone outside.

Overdrapes for summer should be simple and dainty rather than rich. Cretonne is always good style if the colors chosen are harmonious and restful. Avoid warm reds and seek rather cool greens, restful browns and delicate yellows with soft gray and taupe and tan for backgrounds.

For summer cottages and bungalows, checked ginghams or plain chambray in pretty shades of blue, green ,yellow and rose make charming overdrapes for the bedrooms. Ginghams and chambrays are suitable for nursery and children's rooms either for the summer home or the permanent winter residence.

PRICE OF EGGS THIS EASTER SEASON IS LOWEST IN YEARS

Eggs, the time honored delicacy of the Easter table, are selling at lower prices this year than they have for several years, according to local grocers. The season seems to have been blessed with a plentiful supply of eggs this season which accounts for the low price. Last Easter they sold for forty-five cents a dozen.

The Middlesboro egg supply comes from Tennessee and Virginia. Many farmers of those section turn their spare time in the winter and early spring months to the profitable work of egg production and make frequent trips to Middlesboro and dispose of their poultry and eggs to grocers and housewives.

The prevaling low price of eggs, it seems, indicate a plenteous supply of chickens also, but if there exists an over supply of these, such is not indicated by the present prices. They are still selling at thirty cents a pound on foot, the price they have maintained all through the winter months.

Grocers report increased sales in eggs today and also in chickens, for many prefer the latter also in making up the Easter menu. All local dealers have large stocks of chickens and eggs, the latter being absolutely fresh most of them having been received directly from the farmers today or yesterday.
